NEW FRANCHISE ACT STUDIED BRITAIN WANTS LOAN PAYMENT

OTTAWA—A new franchise act is under consideration by the government which proposes to set up a board of franchise commissioners which will have authority over registration of voters and keeping of a permanent list of electors which will have to be revised annually whether there is a Dominion election or not," said the Ottawa Journal in the news column on Monday.

"The setting up of a board to have complete authority over the voters lists throughout the country will mean this work will be taken out of the hands of James Cavanaugh, chief electoral officer, who will continue to be in charge of elections and in charge of returning officers in the 145 constituencies.

"When the new franchise bill has been approved by parliament, it is proclaimed by the government-in-council, after which there will be a general revision of the voters' lists. The act further provides that the lists must be revised each year between April and June."

LONDON—Great Britain, whose financial interests have a stake of $120,000,000 in the Dawes and Young loans, has publicly but firmly warned Germany against cutting of interest payments on these loans.

The British government would take a "grave view" of placing a moratorium on these loans, it was officially learned as Reichsbank officials and foreign bondholders' representatives met in Berlin to thresh out the problem of medium-and-long-term credit transfers.

It was dispatched a short time ago that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the German Central Bank, declared in an address that "even a partial continuation of her payments in foreign exchange is no longer possible."

The Dawes and Young loans to Germany were made under inter-governmental auspices and are governed by agreements reached at the Hague conference in 1924 and at the Hague and Paris in 1930.

WHAT ABOUT SOCIAL CREDIT, CANADA?

This series is an explanation of the Douglas Social Credit Plan. Mr. Williams (W) a Social Credit advocate, is interviewed at the place by his friend, Mr. Jones (J). The scene is Mr. Williams' home, and the conversation takes place during an evening visit.

W. "Now, to me, the two essentials for the basis of a happy life are freedom and economic security."

J. "I believe I agree with you to the abundance of the real wealth of my country."

W. "My own desire is to be free to live my life, provided I do not encroach on the rights of my neighbors. I expect to have the privilege of co-operating in increasing the wealth of the community but I claim the freedom to engage in pursuit for which I am able and training especially adapted. My other desire is to be assured of a comfortable economic supply for myself and family provided out of the abundance of the real wealth of my country."

J. "Yes, I guess I want the same thing. But you expect to work for it, don't you?"

W. "Certainly, if my contribution is needed. But if no niche can be found for me in the field of production, by reason of the use of machinery, and because other men, more skilled than I, can handle all the production needed, then I do not believe that I should be compelled to suffer through lack of necessities or comforts just because my services are not required to produce them."

J. "Oh, but there is always plenty of work for the man who is willing to work."

W. "Yes, if the money is forthcoming."

J. "But you're going to tell me how it will always be forthcoming."

W. "The first step is to set up a department which may be called the National Credit Authority. This department would be supplied with accurate figures regarding the real wealth of the country and other useful statistics regarding the production and consumption of the country."

J. "But that would take some time, and we need something done right away."

W. "Yes, and you could have Social Credit right away but I'm explaining how it would work once it had been instituted. From the figures this department would be supplied with accurate figures regarding the real wealth of the country and other useful statistics regarding the production and consumption of the country."

J. "That would take some time, and we need something done right away."

J. "That would take some time, and we need something done right away."

Most Especially Conducted

The Captain and the crew, the ship's Doctor, and more particularly the kindly, motherly stewardess of the Canadian Pacific liner Montclair all shared the responsibility of personally conducting the recent trans-Atlantic journey of Mary Estella Barr of Halifax. Mary Estella has six months of her active life behind her, and the last witness of the Montclair's journey for many happy years to come. The journey was necessary because Mary Estella is motherless, and her father, Peter Barr of Halifax, though unwilling to part with his baby daughter, yielded to the wishes of his parents in Leith, Scotland, to send the baby to them. Her grandparents met her at Glasgow.

ratio between production and consumption and would be able to make a fraction that represented that ratio. Then any and all business undertakings will be accepted for registration under an assisted price scheme, by entering into an agreement with the government by which the firm agrees to sell its goods at a fair average profit on turnover, these firms will be able to sell their goods at what is known as the Just Price."

J. "What does that term mean?"

W. "It is a name given to the price of an article which represents the true cost and not the financial cost. J. "But—"

J. "Just a minute, I know you want to explain that, but let me finish telling you about the arrangement with the National Credit Authority and how it would affect business. If the fraction set by the National Credit Authority were three quarters, it would mean that these firms who had voluntarily entered into the agreement regarding the specified price, would be able to retain their goods to the ultimate consumer at a price representing three quarters of their usual selling price. For instance, we will suppose that a fair price for a store is now $10. A firm selling that store at the Just Price would sell it to the consumer for $7.50."

J. "But that would lose $2.50 on the transaction."

W. "No, because that is why they entered into the agreement regarding the average profit. The National Credit Authority would, on proof of sale issue the other $2.50 to them to make up the regular selling price."

J. "But where would the National Credit Authority get the $2.50?"

W. "Well, my heavens, have we not to go back over all the story of money that it comes from, and all about it again? The National Credit Authority would do it, of course."

J. "But you never said anything about the government resuming the right to issue money and credit."

W. "No, by Jove, your right, old man. I owe you an apology, I did forget to mention it, and an apology you were quick enough to see that this is the first step; that it must be recognized that the creation, and the control of all money or anything that acts as money (which of course includes bank credit) must be again referred to the Crown in fact and not merely in theory."

The real wealth of the country is found not in the country itself and the logical idea is that the people, through their elected rulers, should control this wealth by means of financial policy relating to the creation and operation of the financial system of the country."

Seedlings are now being sent to these institutions and to the Ponoka mental hospital from the central provincial nurseries at Oliver, near Edmonton. The grounds of these institutions will be utilized for the development of these seedlings under proper supervision, and in a couple of years or so trees should be available for distribution for beautifying of farms, school grounds, etc.

Fishing season opens May 16, except for trout and grayling in the Athabasca and its tributaries, where the opening date is June 15.
